Lieutenant Charles Monteal.

BY CAPT. JAMES MONTFORD.

'My closest associate and friend in the war was Lieutenant Charles Monteal,' said the Colonel, 'and as my niece is to leave me in the morning, I will relate his story. It may convey a moral to her.'

'I will give attention to your story, uncle, and not neglect the moral,' returned the young lady; and the Colonel prepared to begin.

'The lieutenant was several years younger than myself, being about twenty-six at the time. He was tall, and straight as a dart; his face was handsome, but wore a rather mournful expression, usually quite Byronic, the ladies said.

'I would occupy too much time to relate the manner we became acquainted. He did me several signal favors during the time of our intimacy.

'Charles had formed an 'unfortunate attachment' for a young lady, the daughter of a Southern planter, whom he had met in New York prior to the breaking out of the war.

'He told me all about it in one of his melancholy moods, and I recollect the circumstances very well.

'He had seemed successful at first, and although Miss Angell, as I shall call her, had made no engagement with him, they understood each other well enough; and her father did not seem averse to their union. Monteal was wealthy, and his morals unobjectionable.

'But suddenly 'a change came o'er the spirit of his dream,' so he told me. There was to be fighting. Charles was interested, as all young men should be. Unfortunately, Mr. Angell was also interested, and the young lady inclined toward her father's faith.

'One evening Monteal allowed himself to be drawn into an argument with the old gentleman, the latter cast some reflections upon the Government, and both gentlemen became warm.

'It was a violent time, and before the interview was over Mr. Angell had given the young man to understand that his acquaintance was no longer desired.

'Charles told me the two days that followed were the most miserable of his life, and, knowing his disposition, I believed him.

'The Angells were preparing to return home; Monteal sought and obtained an interview with Miss Angell during her father's absence from the house.

'Before he left she admitted that she did not hate him; but he was assured that her father's consent was necessary to obtain her for his wife, and this he despaired of gaining.

'While he was endeavoring to 'see' Mr. Angell, he suddenly migrated, carrying his daughter in his train.

'Then the young man wrote letters; but the replies he received were not pleasant. He learned that the lady's brothers were collecting regiments, and when the war broke out in earnest Charles joined the Blues out of sheer desperation.

'Soon afterward I made his acquaintance, and gained a knowledge of his story.

'One day in May, 1862, he saw the young lady once more. She had come to the residence of a friend dwelling fifty miles or so from our station. Charles had requested this, and she cared enough for him to consent.

'He never told me what passed at the interview, though, as he had been so frank in the former account, I expected it.

'He was very melancholy the next morning, however, and I could guess how matters were going, and my ideas were confirmed by the following song and its explanation:

"'Our women have hung their harps away,
And they scowl on your brutal bands,
While the nimble poniard dares the day,
In their brave, defiant hands.'

'Why do you sing that?' I demanded.

"'It was sung to me last night,' he replied, 'and will haunt my memory until my dying day. Isn't this a terrible state of affairs?'

'Then he left me, with a sorrowful shake of the head.

'I saw very little of Monteal for the next three weeks. Several times I tried to rouse him from the state of apathy into which he had fallen, but all in vain.

'At last our duty carried us into the neighborhood of Mr. Angell, and I saw that his proximity to the woman he loved made a decided impression upon the Lieutenant.

"Fearing some accident, I scarcely knew what, I watched him closely. In the meantime we were skirmishing continually with separate bands of Confederates, and slowly gaining ground upon them.

'At last the time fated for the end of Monteal's romance came.

'We were surprised during the night, several pickets killed, and some horses captured. The morning following I was ordered out in pursuit of the band, which was small, and was supposed to have been raised in the neighborhood.

'Monteal requested leave to accompany me. I would have refused if I could have done so; for I suspected that he had some plan in view.

'But there was nothing for it but he must go, and we started, with a negro in the train, who was to guide us upon our search.

'To be brief, we found the trail of the marauders, followed it for several miles, and at last came upon their encampment.

'Their band was somewhat less than ours, and after a brisk skirmish we recaptured the horses and put the foes to flight.

'I had been ordered to exterminate the band, if possible, and immediately began the pursuit. The leader of the band was a beardless young fellow, with considerable spirit. Monteal seemed to recognize him, for his eyes had been fastened upon the fellow continually, and his face was very pale.

'I demanded if he knew him, as we rode along in hot pursuit, but Monteal only shook his head, and I was certain of that which I had proof of an hour later.

'The young captain was Miss Angell's brother. I must keep a close watch upon you, Monteal, I thought; for we were now approaching the plantation owned by Mr. Angell.

'The enemy were now a considerable distance in advance; it was late in the afternoon, and I feared they would escape during the darkness of the approaching night.

'I urged the horses and men to greater exertion, and suddenly I saw that some accident had happened to the pursued.

'They had come to a halt down in the centre of the road, and from the excited motions of the men about the young captain, whom they were assisting from his horse, I knew he was wounded.

'My men gave a hearty hurrah and increased their speed. I glanced at Monteal. His face was deathly pale, his teeth clenched, and his eyes fastened upon the group of men down the road who were lessening in number every moment.

"'My God!' exclaimed Monteal as he met my glance.

'I spoke to him, but my voice was not heard, and five minutes later we were upon the foe.

'A few shots were exchanged, and the rebels scattered in every direction, except a few faithful ones who remained around their wounded leader.

'I commanded our men back, and dismounted at the side of the wounded Captain. Monteal was already upon the ground.

'The victim of the fight lay, with his head resting upon a saddle, pale and fainting. There was blood upon the face and uniform, and I soon discovered something else.

A mass of hair had fallen from under her hat, where it had been confined, and pronounced the young Captain to be a woman.

"'I suspected it all!' exclaimed Monteal, who seemed to have been stricken dumb for a moment. 'Oh, Edith!'

'The girl glanced up into his face, a faint smile parting her lips.

"'You remember what I said to you not long ago, Charley?' she said faintly. And then she chanted in a weak tone the verse I had heard Monteal repeat:

"'Our women have hung their harps away,
And they scowl on your brutal bands,
While the nimble poniard dares the day
In their brave, defiant hands.'

'I turned aside while Monteal knelt and clasped the dying woman in his arms.

'Our bands were not altogether brutal; for I saw several horny hands raised to eyes that glittered so sternly along the sights that were to sweep the foes from the land.

'Miss Angell had quarreled with her lover during their last interview, and had said to him that she would convince him that if her friends were rebels she was also one. This disguise and rash attempt had followed.

'She had been wounded by a fling shot, and already knew that death was near.

'Twenty minutes later she died in her lover's arms. I had retreated down the road with my men, and did not witness the last parting; but after the end had passed Monteal came toward me.

'There was something so terrible in his looks that I feared to speak to him. Outwardly he was perfectly composed, but his face was pale, and he carried his way very erect.

"'We must take her home,' he said, hoarsely, without looking in my face; 'please give the orders.'

'I obeyed his request, and we took the lady to her father's abode. There another terrible scene took place, and I was glad to escape back to camp.

'I lost a friend that day; forever after Monteal avoided me, and at last told me frankly that he could not bear the thought of associating with one who might have fired the fatal shot.

'I understood his mood and respected it, and Monteal wandered from my sight.

'He was killed at Vicksburg in the hotest part of the fight, and I really believe he sought death, for his carelessness of life was much talked of.'

Holding a Seat.

'Will you be kind enough to watch my seat here and allow no one to get into it while I go into the smoking car and take a smoke?' asked the presumptuous passenger in the opposite seat of me.

What else could I do but to answer yes, though I had started out on a pleasure excursion, and this man's condescension quite knocked all the pleasure out of the trip at the beginning, and now that fatal seat lay on my mind like my last year's debts—provided I had some.

At the next station a big man came in, and spying the only vacant seat, preemptied it on the spot, and proceeded to make himself comfortable. I sat a long time considering how far my responsibility went, but I saw that I must do something, so I mildly whispered to him that the seat belonged to another, and he scowled and left at the next station, where some ladies got aboard. As a last resort I placed my new hat over in the seat to preserve it—the seat, not the hat—and two of the females sat down on the hat. They did not appear to notice the hat, or probably thought it was the bustle, and began to make themselves at home. I told them as cooly as I could that the seat was occupied. They said of course it was. I remarked that the owner's hat was under them. They obliterated me with a frown and got up; the hat didn't get up. Its get-up was gone. I tried to straighten out the hat and felt sick, so did the hat. I indulged inwardly in some strengthy secular language, and soon a tall, long fellow got aboard whose pantaloons were poked into his boots to rest, and whose shirt yearned toward a wash-tub, and took the fatal seat without paying any attention to me waving him away.

I had to do it, though I shuddered. I walked to him and gently and politely told him the seat belonged to another man, when, all of a sudden, he jumped up as if there was a tack in the seat and gave a regular Commache howl, as I sat back into my seat, wishing there was a trap door through the floor of the car.

'This seat belongs to another, does it? Where is the duffer? Where are his symptoms? Nothing here. Where are his remains, his silk umbrella, his peanut shells, his terbacker spit, his chewing-gum shoes, his fur-collar overcoat, his thirty-eight calibre valise, and his eye-glass? Show me, if you please, his assets, his liabilities, his heirs, administrators or assigns! Where is his mortgage, or his lion, or twenty years' lease? I am cross-eyed Bill from Brazos [and he parenthasized the name with a couple of long-horn revolvers.] Are you the ozone, the canned fruit man who is trying to preserve this seat for the coming man, or the rising generation?'

I begged to prove an alibi, instantly, or anything legal that was necessary or would do any good, and begged him not to mention it, when in came the former occupant and asked the stranger shortly to get out. The stranger got out, and the owner of the seat began to fall all over himself, to explore the ceiling with his feet, to test the floor, to unhandle the neighboring seats, and when the stranger laid him gently down in the aisle and spread him out comfortable to rest and recumperate, and catch his breath, and get his health back, and try to feel better, and try to be easier, and wait for a doctor, and gather his senses, I had time to think that it was the right way for a man to be served who will ask another to hold his seat during his absence.—Detroit Free Press.

Curiosities of Number Seven.

The frequent recurrence of the number seven in the Bible seems, says the Cincinnati Inquirer, to indicate that there are associated with it certain events, that it may be termed the prophetic, representative symbolic number consecrated in the holy scriptures and the religion of the Jews and other nations, by many mysterious events and circumstances.

The old testament informs us that God completed the work of creation in seven days and set apart the seventh day to be a day of rest for all mankind.

The slayer of Abel was to be punished seven fold and the slayer of Lamech seventy and seven-fold.

Of every clean beast Noah took into the ark by sevens and took with him seven souls when he entered the ark. After seven days, the waters were upon the face of the earth. The intervals between sending out the dove the second and third times were seven days and the seventh month the ark rested on Ararat.

In Pharaoh's two dreams he saw seven well-favored and fat kine and seven ill-favored and lean kine and seven ears of corn on one stalk, rank and good, and seven ears blasted by the east wind, which was followed with seven years of great plenty and seven years of famine.

The children of Israel were commanded to eat unleaven bread seven days and to observe the feast of unleaved bread; seven days shall there be no leaven bread found in your houses.

The seventh month was signalized by the feast of trumpets and the celebration of the feast of tabernacle.

Seven weeks was the interval betwen the passover and the pentecost.

The seventh year was observed as the Sabbatical year, and the year succeeding seven times seven years as the year of jubilee.

Seven days were appointed as the length of the feasts of tabernacles and passover.

Seven days for the ceremonies of the consecration of the priests.

Seven victims were to be offered on any special occasion.

When Abraham and Abimelech wanted to confirm an oath they took seven ewe lambs of the flock.

Jacob served Laban seven years for each of his daughters.

Delilah bound Samson with seven green withes and wove the seven locks of his hair in the web.

Seven priests, bearing seven trumpets, passed round the walls of Jericho seven days, on the seventh day passing around seven times, and it fell.

Nebuchadnezzar had the furnace heated seven times hotter than it was wont to be heated to burn the three Hebrew children, and was driven from among men to the beasts of the field until seven times passed over him.

Elisha commanded Naaman to wash in Jordan seven times and be cured of his leprosy.

The sluggarn is wiser in his own conceit than seven men who can render a reason.

In the new testament the Saviour commanded to forgive an erring brother not until seven times, but seventy times seven if he repented.

In Revelations of St. John we read seven churches, seven spirits, seven stars, seven seals, seven lamps, seven golden candlesticks, seven angels, seven vials and seven last plagues.

Judge Davis and the Railroad Lawyers.

Phocion Howard tells us a story illustrative of the late Judge David Davis' manner of dealing with the "technically" lawful. A railroad had been surveyed through Vermillion county some time before and had taken a deed for an innocent old chap's farm, giving him in payment for it a lot of stock which was represented to be of par value. The farmer afterward found that the stock was almost if not quite valueless and brought suit in the federal court to have the deed set aside and his farm returned to him. The case came before Judge Davis. The railroad company had two or three of the shrewdest attorneys to be had, while the plaintiff was represeuted by a green country lawyer. It was evident from the start that the defendant's lawyers would outgeneral the countryman at every turn, and so they did until the evidence was all in and the case submitted for decision.

'Gentlemen,' said Judge Davis, 'I am familiar with the laws governing this case and with all the statues touching such cases, but I know of no law to prevent a railroad company from stealing a man's farm.'

The agent of the defendant—a man named Griggs—whispered to one of his attorneys that it was all right. The attorneys looked at each other with confident winks and settled back to hear the decision in their favor.

'I know of no law to prevent a railroad company from stealing a man's farm,' repeated Judge Davis, 'but so long as I sit on this bench I will not permit them to keep it. Decision for plaintiff.'

MATRIMONIAL FREAKS.

Remarkable Cases that Have Come to the Notice of a Clergyman—The Tragedy of a Chorus Girl.

Speaking of the many features which enliven the matrimonial market, a well-known clergyman said to a Boston Globe reporter: One of the many remarkable cases I recall is that of a beautiful young girl who was married to a wealthy man of three score years and nine. The acquaintance was made at one of our theaters, where Laura was engaged as chorus girl. The brief acquaintance ripened into a strong regard, and finally they were married. Laura after a time tired of her aged partner and sought her old haunts, and on any pleasant day she might be seen upon the road behind four handsome coal-black horses, in her barouche, the flashiest in town, with some half a dozen young swells. The husband looked upon all these peccadiloes without a word of remonstrance, and endeavored all the harder to wean her from the evil influences which surrounded her, but without avail. It was but a few months after their marriage that the wife, deserting her husband and home, took passage on a steamer for London, and, arriving there, occupied quarters with a well-known elocutionist, who had figured prominently in the social world, and who had sailed a week previous for old England. The two were married within a few days by the queen's chaplain and started for the coast for their honeymoon. On the first day the couple retired at an early hour, but when morning came the domestic found the husband of a few hours stretched cold and dead across the bed, a small blue circle in the forehead where a bullet had entered. He had taken his own life. The young man's family made inquiries regarding the character of the widow, and when the reports came in so detrimental to her honor and reputation she was sent out into the world to fight its battles alone, uncared for and unknown. The first husband became a victim to grief and died, and the bride, weakened by the forced dissipations, survived him but a short time, and the remarkable career began so auspiciously, so happily, ended in the bereavement of three families.

Only a few weeks ago a handsome team drove to my door and a moment later a lady and gentleman entered our apartments and asked to be married. The lady was young, beautiful and wealthy. The husband to be was a common sailor, the odor of tar still strong upon him, while every feature showed a barrenness of even ordinary ability. I led the lady to another part of the room, when I asked an explanation. All I could get was that they were bent on marrying and if I didn't do it some one else would, and at last the knot was tied and the couple drove away. I have since learned that Jack returned immediately to his ship and took passage to Liverpool, where to-day the couple live in contentment.

Another singular incident in my career as a minister was the marriage of the father of one of the most prominent political officers of the state. What makes it more interesting is that the offspring was not even aware that his parents were lawful husband and wife. While at a public reception a few weeks ago I was introduced to the man in question, and remarked that years ago I had married his father to an estimable young woman. The son, after a moment's reflection, left the house, saying that he would investigate the matter, but whether he did or not I cannot tell. It was years before that the husband, having buried his wife, retired in seclusion with only a housekeeper to assist in the management of the house, and they lived as such for many years. One afternoon a neighbor visited me and inquired whether I had married them, but I knew nothing of their marriage and told him so, but it was only a few weeks later that I was visited by the husband and his housekeeper, who expressed a desire to be wedded. 'Have you your certificate?' I asked. No; he had none with him, but promised that if I would wait a few moments he would obtain one, as he had made application years previous and had been granted his papers. He went home and soon returned with his certificate, old and yellow with age, but the legal instrument, and they were married on the spot, and the son was the legal offspring of that marriage.

I have met couples who would not be married with metal rings, and I have cut circles from the groom's gloves to satisfy them. I have known of the church key being the substitute for the wedding-ring, of a clergyman's stopping a wedding service because the wedding-ring was diamond instead of the ordinary band, and of no end of trouble being caused by a wedding-ring which the bride mistrusted to be brass being placed on her finger, and I recall an instance where a common curtain-ring answered the purpose of a more suitable and costly one. The question of fees is a most interesting one, and in my experience as minister I have received almost every sum, from a silver dollar to a check for $100, and almost every conceivable gift, from a copy of the church ritual, elegantly bound, to less portable but more valuable evidences of appreciation.

Earthquakes and Other Earth Movements.

We are accustomed to think of the land of the earth as something solid and fixed; and, as a testimonial of this impression, the Latin phrase terra firma, firm land or solid ground, has been naturalized in the languages of nearly all civilized people. On the other hand, we speak of water as unsuitable. But the geological history of the earth and the more careful observations of modern times have taught us that these ideas do not correctly represent the qualities of the land-masses and water-masses of the globe as compared with one another. The ancient shore marks on the continents and the phenomena of elevation and subsidence that have been observed in historic times, confirming their evidence, show that the land and the ocean are continually changing their level as to one another; and it has further been made evident, by experiment, as well as by a priori reasoning, that it is not the ocean that changes, but the land which undergoes alternate movements of elevation and depression. An earthquake-shock is a phenomenon well adapted to destroy the faith of any person who feels one in the fixedness of the earth; and such, by the evidence, is the effect for the time on all who experience these shocks. Even the light pulsations which sometimes pass over parts of the United States occasion panic and excite a momentary impression that everything is falling over or sinking away; while the more violent shocks that are felt in earthquake-infested countries produce indescribable terror; and such catastrophies as those historical earthquakes of Lisbon and Caracas, and the more recent ones of Ischi and the Straight of Sunda amount to a demonstration that the reason for such terrors is real, and that the continents also can not escape the general law of change and perishability.

Earth-movements—the name by which these phenomena may be most conveniently described—are various, and comprise, so far as they are now considered, earthquakes, or sudden violent movements of the ground; earth-tremors or minute movements which usually escape attention by the smallness of their amplitude; earth pulsations, or movements which are overlooked on account of the length of their period; and earth oscillations or movements of long period and large amplitude—like the shifting of levels of land-masses—which attract attention from their geological importance. Some of these movements have only recently begun to attract attention. They are all intimately associated in their occurrence and their origin.—Popular Science Monthly.

Perfectly Satisfactory.

A fresh looking Western man, who said he was from Peoria, Ill., and was on his way back from the White Mountains, stopped at the office of the Fall River Line, in the Old State House, the other afternoon and said:

'I want a stateroom on the steamer for day after to-morrow night.'

'Yes, sir.'

'I want an outside room, up stairs.'

'Yes, sir.'

'Far'ard end of the boat.'

'Yes, sir.'

'Wind'ard side.'

'Windward side of the boat? How do we know which will be the windward side of the boat day after to-morrow night?'

'Can't help it; the nights are hot, and if I can't get a room on the windy side of the boat I'll go by the train,' said the Western man.

'Ah, very well,' said the clerk, 'I'll wire right on to Washington and have a northwest breeze, say fifteen miles an hour, ordered for you after to-morrow night, sure.'

The Peoria man bought his stateroom ticket and went away perfectly satisfied.

GENERAL trade reports are more favorable this week than they have been for a long while past, says Farley's Trade sheet, published in Philadelphia. Sentences like the above, from good authority, are worth framing.

HON. ALLEN G. THURMAN, of Ohio, declares himself out of politics. In a brief address which he recently made at Cincinnati he remarked "I shall never hold an office again." It's a pity to see men like Thurman let go of the political wheel.

MAYOR SMITH of Philadelphia will be impeached. The city councils met on Monday evening and voted for his prosecution, the vote standing 49 to 38. This action practically ends the career of the dandy mayor and should be a warning precept for other crooked officials.

PRESIDENT Cleveland's vacation is at an end and he and Mrs. Cleveland returned to Washington yesterday. Quite likely Frankie reminded Grover that it's about time for housecleaning and setting up stoves and Grover, like a good husband, hastens to attend to these imperative duties.

SOUTH CAROLINA, and especially Charleston were again shaken up by an earthquake on Tuesday night. It caused the houses to rattle uncomfortably, and the wall of the Medical College, which was already weakened by former shocks, fell in leaving the building a gaping ruin. It is said that the people of Charleston took the occurrence very cool and calm.

GOWEN, the president of the Pennsylvania and Reading Railroad Company, was compelled to step down and out. His promises to put the financial condition of that road on a solid footing not only remained unfulfilled but during the last year of his presidency the debt of the company has increased daily by thousands of dollars. Efforts will be made for a reorganization, but Franklin B. Gowen will be a dead letter from now on in Reading railroad matters.

JUDGE JAMES R. LUDLOW, of Philadelphia, died on Monday morning at his residence on Chestnut street. His death was caused by an affection of the heart. Judge Ludlow practiced in the courts of Philadelphia from 1846 to 1857, when the democrats elected him President Judge of Common Pleas, which position he filled with great honor and ability for three successive terms. His thirty years carreer on the bench showed him one of the most eminent jurists in the country. He reached the age of sixty-one years.

THE Democratic candidates on the state ticket have sent their letters of acceptance to the committee appointed to notify them of their nomination. Mr. Black in his letter clearly defines his and his party's position on the important issues which contront the people of Pennsylvania. He squarely faces the anti-discrimination question and would insist upon the enforcement of articles 16 and 17 of the constitution, which are intended to provide equal and lawful rights upon the highways of the Commonwealth to all the people. On this point he uses among other forcible arguments the following pointed expression: "We propose to hold the shield of the Constitution over all alike; and behind it there is no place for extortion on the one hand or for confiscation on the other."

He treats of labor protection and favors self-organization of the labor element, and believes that the remedy for all the fierce struggles between capital and labor is in the law. He goes on to say that "industry organized under the law, and with the protection of the law that is given to capital, would find its own safety in the just restraints of the law, which make the rights of person and property sacred under our free institutions."

Lastly he gives his views upon the prohibition issues, and in a plausible manner states the reasons why the democratic party and he as its standard bearer cannot and will not favor sumptuary measures and laws forbiding the manufacture of liquors. As a whole it is a letter which gives evidence of Mr. Black's eminent statesmanship and highest ability and we only regret that our space is too limited to insert it in our columns. It is without a dispute the ablest piece of campaign literature that has yet met the eye of the voter.

The letters of each of the other candidates contain pledges to the faithful performance of the duties of the offices for which they are candidates, and are brief and explicit.

Beaver for Prohibition.

Gen. Beaver has returned to Pennsylvania and has given a new direction to his canvass. He declares himself boldly for the Prohibition cause and says there is only one way to boom it—the way of the Republican State platform. That it may be seen no injustice is done Gen. Beaver by this report we copy from the two leading Republican newspapers of Pittsburg their accounts of an interview with him.

The Chronicle Telegraph, the Republican afternoon paper, declares that he said: "The prohibition plank in the Republican platform? When that plank was put into our platform I took it for granted that the party meant what it said. And so as regards the Prohibition party, the only way in which temperance can be accomplished in this State is by the principle set forth in the plank in the Republican platform. I myself accept that platform as verity."

The Commercial Gazette, the Republican morning paper, says that when he was asked. "What do you think of Wolfe's attitude towards the Prohibition plank in the Republican platform?" Gen. Beaver said: "I think that not a Republican paper in the State should allow Wolfe's name to be mentioned in it. The newspapers have made him think that he is a bigger man than he really is. I did not care to discuss Wolfe's attitude, as it would only tend to exaggerate his importance. The Republican party is not afraid of him."

In discussing the Republican platform the General said: "I take it for granted that the Republicans were honest in embodying the temperance plank in their platform. I believe that is the only practical way the Prohibitionists can ever boom the cause of temperance in this State. I propose to make a thorough canvass of the State on that theory and if I am elected I will endeavor to carry out the principles embodied in the platform."

Gaining Strength Daily.

From the Doylestown Democrat.

Chauncey F. Black, the Democratic candidate for Governor, is gaining strength daily. He is especially worthy of support, and challenges the good opinion and confidence of men of all parties. Thousands of Republicans will attest this by voting for him. Mr. Black, in one respect, has the advantage of most public men in the State; he is an earnest and faithful student of economic questions connected with politics. The question of labor in relation to capital, and rapidly becoming the most important that statesmen will have to deal with in the near future, he has studied with close attention, and prepared to deal with it intelligently. If he should be elected for Governor, labor will have in him a friend who will see to it, that the laws, passed in in its interest are enforced. He has likewise devoted much attention to questions that interest the farmer, a class often overlooked by those who make and execute our laws.

The Latest in Politics.

What is Going on at Democratic State Headquarters and Elsewhere.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—The past few days have been very busy ones at the Democratic State committee rooms, and P. Gray Meek came down from Bellefonte on Monday to aid in the work, as well as other added stenographic and clerical help. The mails have been unusually heavy, and those who went through them report the condition of affairs in the State, as betokened by these communications, to be unexpectedly promising. The county, district, sub-district and vigilance committees all over the State are said to be more prompt than ever was known before.

"We are not making estimates claiming majorities nor giving figures just now," said Chairman Hensel, "and above all we want to avoid the brass band business just as long as it can be postponed, but we are strengthening the school district and township organization and we are satisfying ourselves that we have a well-eqipped body in every election district of the State. If that is done, the naturalizations effected and the taxes paid within the next two weeks I will be satisfied."

The books of the vigilance committees for the State, now being turned in rapidly, will bear the names of from 50,000 to 75,000 of the active party workers; and names and orders are also being received and filled for poll books, copies of the Pennsylvania election law, illustrated biographical sketches of the State candidates, the platform, an account of Black's reception by his neighbors and his speech to them, pamphlets on Beaver's store orders, anti-discrimination, the labor question and other issues of the campaign, of which about a half million copies are in press or preparation. There is a very lively demand for the exposition of the store-order business and of Beaver's relations with it, and a number of specimens of these famous "orders" have been sent to the committee rooms by persons who bought them at a ten per cent. discount from workingmen, who received them instead of cash, and, finding them redeemable only in trade at the company store, submitted to the "shave" to get ready money. Throughout the mining regions there is much demand for facsimiles of the coupon orders, especially of the one, three and five cent denomination, and it is said that Beaver has become so alarmed at the effect of the issue that he has ordered his company to pay in cash only until after the election.

The Democrats claim also to be confident that both the liquor and prohibition interests are dissatisfied with Beaver's recent manifold and equivocal utterances on the liquor question, and that his various interviews at Pittsburg have added to the embarrassment of his campaign.

Neither State committee chairman makes a concealment of a scarcity of campaign funds, and no systematic assessments can be any longer levied and collected in the departments; but inasmuch as quite a number of the old Republican employes holding over under Democratic heads of departments have chipped their usual remittances into Cooper's hat, there are pretty plain intimations at the Democratic headquarters that they expect to hear from those who are drawing official salaries, and the managers of Black's campaign point to Cleveland's contribution of $1,000 last year to Governer Hill's election in New York as a lively reminder of a reform administration's notions of its voluntary duty to its party organization. No fears are entertained either in the State or city committees of a lack of necessary funds to meet all the legitimate expenses of the campaign.

The city committee is diligently at work canvassing the tax receipt lists. Arrangements have been made for two mass meetings at the Academy of Music in October, and all the detailed work is being looked after by the organization committee, which meets every Monday afternoon, from 4 to 6, with Hensel, at the State committee headquarters.

Miscellaneous News.

Killed by a Falling Limb.

Joseph Dornkamper, aged about 18 years, was chopping down trees on the West branch of Youngwoman's Creek last week when a dead limb fell from the tree and struck Joseph on the head with great force. He died of the injury the next day and was taken to his home in Bald Eagle township.

The Audubon Society.

THE Audubon Society for the Protection of Birds, which is now incorporated, enters upon its second half-year with a membership of over 12,000. There ought to be ten times as many members, for the objects of the society are most commendable and should enlist the sympathies of every one who cares for the preservation of our song birds. The society wants a local secretary in every town in the country. It issues handsome certificates to members. No expenses of any kind are incurred by those who join. Correspondence is invited. Circulars of information will be sent free on application to the Audubon Society, No. 39 Park Row, New York.

THE CHOLERA SCOURGE.

Thousands of Deaths in Japan and in Corea.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—Advices by the steamer Guelic, which arrived here yesterday from China and Japan, are as follows: The total number of cholera cases throughout Japan since its first appearance this year is according to the Japan Gazette, 59,000, of which, 37,000 resulted fatally. The indications are that the epidemic is now abating. Intelligence from Seoul, Corea, says cholera is still raging in that city. According to official returns the fatal cases for July this year were 38,600 out of a population of 250,000. Outside of the Capital the epidemic is equally fatal. At Shinshu, province of Keishodo, 5000 and at Tomi 6000 deaths are reported to have occurred in one month.

IN TIME OF PEACE PREPARE FOR PEACE.—Changes of climate, diet and water, ofttimes atmospheric changes alone, will subject some member of the family to cholera morbus, dysentery, &c., when that wail of misery in the "wee sma' hours of the night" announce the fact, and you are sent from your comfortable bed across lots or down back alleys for a doctor, 'twould be a good time to reflect that had you only secured a bottle of Curtis' Carmelite Cordial in time, you could with a few drops have headed off the attack, saved a doctor's bill, and secured a peaceful night's rest. Dissatisfied purchasers can have their money refunded.

ANOTHER CASHIER CAUGHT.

Neal Dow's Son-in-Law Robs a Bank of $145,000.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 20.—This community has been shocked by the discovery that William E. Gould, Cashier of the First National Bank, is short about $145,000, all lost by speculation in Wall street. Mr. Gould, who is the son-in-law of General Neal Dow, the temperance apostle, has a wife and three children, is 52 years old, and has been a man of ostentatious piety, frequently preaching in small churches in the vicinity to supply pastoral vacancies.

Besides being Cashier of the First National Bank Gould is Vice-President of the National Bankers' Association and of the Portland Trust Company, and is a Trustee of the Maine Savings Bank. It is said that he began embezzling ten years ago, and then again that the first stealing was done in 1882.

SUPPER.—The ladies of the M. E. Mite Society purpose having a supper in the rink in the afternoon and evening of October 30th, 1886. The fare will consist of chickens, waffles, oysters, ice cream and cake.

JENNIE SCHREFFLER, Sec.

—At Tuesday evening's town council meeting it was resolved to construct a stone crossing from Musser & Smith's new hardware corner to W. S. Musser's hotel, and rebuild the three old crossings on Main street square. Nobody is going to kick, so far as can be seen. But don't forget to attend to the boardwalks before winter is here, gentlemen.

—Mr. Benj. Smith, of the firm of J. R. Smith & Co., dealers in furniture, Milton, Pa., was in town over Sunday on business and pleasure combined. He sold two pulpit suits while here, one to the M. E. church and one to the Evangelical church. Mr. Smith, as well as the firm he represents, is well and favorably known here and we shall be glad to see him in town more frequently.

—The first copy of the Centre County Times, puplished at Centre Hall by T. Benton Ulrich, the former editor of the Selinsgrove Times, reached this office last Friday. The paper is of democratic faith and now with two first-class democratic journals Potter township ought to surely go solid for the democratic county ticket and in view of that of course we wish the Times success.

TONIC, ALTERATIVE & CATHARIC.—Simmons Liver Regulator cures malaria, billiousness, dyspepsia, headache, constipation and piles. It is most effective in starting the secretions of the liver, causing the bile to act as a purge. When there is an excess of bile in the stomach, the Regulator is an active purge; after the removal of the bile it will regulate the bowels and impart vigor and health to the whole system.

—Andrew J. and G. Alvin, the sons of Andrew Harter, of Penn township left the parental roof the other day to attend school. The former is in the New England conservatory, Boston, Mass., where he will finish his musical studies, and the latter is a student of the seminary at Selinsgrove. Both are very promising young men and will doubtless make their mark in the future.

—N. W. Ayer & Son's American Newspaper Annual for 1886 is on our table. It is published in Philadelphia and is one of the most complete works of the kind in the country. It contains a carefully prepared list of all newspapers and periodicals in the United States and Canada, giving their general characteristics, time of establishment, size, circulation and advertising rates. We have not the space to enumerate all the other important features of the volume, but it certainly furnishes an incalculable amount of information to the advertising public.

—A gentleman from Brushvalley gave us a little item of news the other day which very much concerns our Rebersburg correspondent. "Squibob" came to said gentleman in poste haste and borrowed a horse and buggy to go on a short business trip and lo, when he returned there was a little stranger at his house whom he seemed to welcome very warmly. The sex, the weight and other interesting particulars will likely be furnished by "Squibob" upon inquiry. No doubt his items for the JOURNAL will be of a happy strain for the next few weeks.

—Prof. A. Bierly tarried in town on Saturday to solicit scholars for a class in vocal music. He succeeded in giving the list a fair start. Persons wishing to subscribe can do so by applying to Dr. J. F. Harter, Mr. J. W. Stover or to the writer, who are in possession of duplicate lists. Prof. Bierly's terms are very reasonable. He will teach a course of 13 lessons for $40, provided 40 scholars can be raised. If more than forty will join the class the individual payments will become proportionally less. Let our people who are musically inclined take a hold of this matter.

—The Bellefonte Daily News of Monday is authority for the statement that Mr. Joe W. Furey, the able associate editor of the Democratic Watchman has gone to Lock Haven, to take charge of the editorial department in the Clinton Democrat office. By this change the Watchman loses one of its best editors while the county will be minus a hard-working and faithful democrat. Of course Clinton county and its leading democratic organ are the gainers and are to be congratulated. Mr. John Youngman, who had been associated editorially with the Philadelphia Times and the Harrisburg Patriot, will take Mr. Furey's place on the Watchman.

FOR SALE.—Two complete outfits of Madame Demorest's System of Dress-Cutting, consisting of a large chart, tape-measure, rule and instruction book for sale at this office. It is considered one of the very best systems and is invaluable to dressmakers. Will be sold at reduced prices.

—Mr. J. A. Gramley, of Rebersburg and J. J. Gramley, of Hublersburg, were early callers at the JOURNAL office on Monday morning. They are the executors of the Joseph Gramley estate in Brushvalley and advertise the decedent's farm for sale in this week's paper. Posters will be issued from this office to morrow. This farm is one of the best and largest in this part of the county and will prove a good investment to purchasers.

—Jas. R. Irwin, druggist, Curwinsville, Pa., writes:

'J. A. McDonald, DEAR SIR:—Send us ½ gross of your Worm Powders—they give good satisfaction to our trade. Professionally, I always recommend them, as I consider they embody to the utmost the principal and most desirable points in a vermifuge—smallness of dose, easiness to take, compactness and eligance, while our steadily increasing sales attest their value as a worm destroyer and the satisfaction they give our trade.'

Dissatisfied purchasers can have their money refunded.

MILLHEIM'S FACTORY.—At last the Hosiery Factory is an assured thing and articles of agreement between the manufacturers and the stock holders are at present being drawn up. The site for the factory building has been secured. The tract of land, situate west of Penn street between Stoner's and Reighard's farms, has been purchased of Mr. Jordan, Aaronsburg, for that purpose. It contains ten acres of ground and affords ample room for all the necessary buildings. After satisfactory arrangements have been arrived at with the Railroad Company about rates, work on the building is to be prosecuted as soon as practicable, and by the first of the new year we may hope to see the establishment in running order. This is the realization of a wish that was fostered by Millheim's enterprising men for many years and as we said before will be a Godsend to the farmers, merchants, mechanics and laborers within a radius of at least five miles. It is hardly necessary to say that the people in general will give the factory a hearty welcome. As matters progress we will give our readers further particulars from time to time.

—The immense crowd at the band festival last Saturday evening again showed that our people never go back on a festival, no matter which organization holds it. The conspicuous features of this occasion were in the first place the tasty decorations and neat arrangement of the rink. Another remarkable sight was the cake table covered with about 50 excellent cakes of all descriptions and makes, furnished by the ladies of this place and Aaronsburg. The presence of the Brushvalley Band and the numerous cake walks were a great help in making the affair pleasant and spicy. The ice cream and oysters were pronounced delicious but the crowd was doomed to disappointment for at about nine o'clock it was announced that the cream was all sold. The net proceeds amount to a small fraction less than $70 and the members of the band take this opportunity to return their sincere thanks to the community and the surrounding country for the liberal patronage received. The band had splendid weather and the boys have the satisfaction to know that by hard labor and good management they had the most successful festival of the season.

—The following account from the Lincoln Co. (Kansas) Democrat of a Sunday school picnic at which Mr. P. B. Stover, a former Centre countian figures as superintendent, shows that Kansas is wide-awake in the Sunday school cause:

The Pleasant Valley Sunday School held its annual picnic in the grove of Mr. Marsh on the 28th ult. This grove is but four miles from Lincoln, along the south side of Bull Foot creek, and is one of the most delightful spots that picnicers could desire.

On the occasion referred to above, every thing was arranged to give the school a pleasant day. A carefully prepared programme of exercises was carried out. Seats had been constructed sufficient to seat 200 persons comfortably, and a rostrum built for the singers and speakers. Promptly at 11 o'clock the school was called to order and the exercises commenced with singing by the choir and prayer by Rev. H. L. Yarger.

The superintendent then made an address of welcome, after which the meeting adjourned until after dinner. Any one looking over the table would not think that Lincoln county was suffering from a famine. Chickens, cakes, pies and everything good was there to replenish "the inner man." It was a dinner such as only the farmers of Lincoln county can prepare.

At 2 o'clock the school reassembled and listened to singing by a well drilled choir and several recitations by the boys and girls of the school. Rev. H. L. Yarger, Lutheran Pastor of the Ellsworth and Lincoln Mission, was present and spoke for 30 minutes on the importance and benefit of Sunday School work in a community.

A larger crowd than was expected was present, and everybody was pleased, and voted it a grand success.

May there be many more such gatherings in the years to come is the wish of one of the VISITORS.

Active, Pushing and Reliable.

Mr. J. Eisenhuth can always be relied upon to carry in stock the purest and best goods, and sustain the reputation of being active, pushing and reliable, by recommending articles with well established merit and such as are popular. Having the agency for the celebrated Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, colds and coughs, will sell it on a positive guarantee. It will surely cure any and every affection of throat, lungs, or chest, and in order to prove our claim, we ask you to call and get a Trial Bottle free.

There were quite a number of sick folks in our vicinity last Thursday. Grangers' picnic?

Henry Keen had a fine watermelon party on Sunday. [Which, the watermelon or the party?—Ed.]

Capt. Mingle and family came down from Bellefonte on last Sunday.

The attendance at the picnic in Fiedler's grove on last Saturday was large. A good many Aaronsburger's were down.

J. H. Musser returned from the Pa. State fair held at Philadelphia. He reports a very fine display of farm machinery and an abundance of all kinds of fruit.

The first copy of the "Centre County Times" made its appearance here last week, editor Ulrich of the same following in a few days, no doubt looking up subscribers for his paper.

Mr. Shelbey, wife and mother, from Snyder county, Pa., are here visiting Mrs. Sarah Shaffer, the mother of Mrs. Shelbey.

Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Rote were visiting in and around Centre Hall during last Saturday and Sunday. Daniel hasn't been away from home much during the last year.

That marriage by Rev. Deitzler last week of Mr. Willie Boob, of this place, to Miss Cora Reifsnyder, of Millheim, was very quiet. Your correspondent knew nothing of it until after their return from their wedding trip to Union county.

We took a peep in at the Band festival at Millheim last Saturday evening. Our stay there was short, but, judging by the management of things and the crowd gathering there, they had the boss festival of the season.

The Aaronsburg correspondent to the Centre Hall Reporter is at a loss to know where he lives. Is it Ackerville, Kistertown or Musser's Hollow? If either of the above will not do we would propose BONEVILLE as an appropriate name for the new north east addition to Aaronsburg. How are you, CAHOOT?

Fourteen cakes at one dollar per cake would make exactly fourteen dollars, in exchange for which we will take music after you receive your new horns. Millheim Band take notice.

The Weaver brothers have broken ground for a butcher shop on the vacant lot which F. J. Weaver bought of the Jacob Wolf estate in east Aaronsburg. The slaughter house will be at the rear end of the lot.

Old mother Reed, wife of Daniel Reed, dec'd, living with her son Jacob at the west end of town, had the misfortune to break one of her limbs close to the hip by falling from the lounge. Her recovery is doubtful. ANOTHER.

MULTUM IN PARVO.—McDonald's Great Blood Purifier or Sarsaparilla Alterative is the most highly concentrated, most harmoniously and skilfully combined of all the blood medicines offered to the public. Many certificates from well-known and worthy persons could be furnished to substantiate the virtues claimed for this great medicine, but the manufacturer prefers simply to say any purchaser feeling the benefit derived from the use of a bottle not equivalent to the seventy-five cents invested in the purchase can have their money refunded.

COBURN.

The excursion to Lemont on Saturday morning did not pan out heavy from this point, only 14 tickets being sold.

Messrs. Grenoble, Bartges & Co. are treating their grain house to a fresh coat of paint which makes a decided improvement.

And now for the Lewisburg fair. The fare from Coburn for the round trip is $1.34. Most everybody is going to take it in.

Station Agt. Kremer has been granted a weeks vacation and he intends using it by visiting the coal regions in company with the station agent from Centre Hall, Mr. Katherman.

On Thursday forenoon word was brought here that a man had been killed at Paddy Mountain Tunnel. On making inquiry we learned that a young man by name of Campbell who was trucking logs on Meck & Wagle's tramway had been killed. He was coming down a grade with a load of logs and for some cause the trucks jumped the track killing the man instantly. His remains were taken to Shamokin the same day where they were prepared for shipment to his home in Maine. Squire Gettig held an inquest over the body of the unfortunate man. VALE.

Adam Weaver, Esq., purchased a very handsome buggy of Gutelius & Son, Mifflinburg.

Since the repairs the school house presents a pretty appearance. The brass bell purchased in Cincinnati, Ohio, has arrived. We trust its sweet, soothing chimes will in a measure compensate for the teacher's harsh words.

We are having new pump stocks erected in the village.

Lots of scandal flying around. ARGENTI.

REBERSBURG.

Last Monday the steam boiler on Guiswite's saw mill sprung a leak and before it was discovered the boiler was nearly empty. Several buckets of water extinguished the fire and a serious accident was thus prevented.

One day last week Jacob Gephart with several others went from house to house in this neighborhood hunting up some evidence on courting business. We pity your case, Jacob, but nevertheless ——

Howard Klepper and family, from Sugar Valley, spent last Saturday and Sunday at Wm. Kreamer's.

George Wate's father is very anxious to hear of his son's whereabouts. George I always thought you had some respect for your parents and hope you will write them a few lines.

Harvey Corman and family, who left last Spring for Kansas, are on their way home to old Brushvalley. It seems that Kansas is not the place for Harvey.

Our band boys are very much pleased with the good time they had at the Millheim band festival. They express their thanks to the members of the Millheim band for the kind treatment received at their hands. But where, where was Charley, the drummer boy, all evening and what became of that nice cake? It did not reach the band boys at all and was likely devoured by the hungry teamsters.

A number of people from this valley expect to take in the Lewisburg fair next Friday. They will have a nice time, no doubt.

Mrs. Jno. Kreamer, an aged lady, is on the sick list. Her recovery is doubtful.

Griffin Garret has the contract to finish George Guiswite's new house.

A certain woman of this neighborhood thinks the Journal should be enlarged, or else two new spapers be published in Millheim. She says that the local columns of the Journal are always crowded to their full est extent with interesting news. That is exactly what I think, Sarah, but I would sooner see one good newspaper than two poor ones. SQUIBOB.

Miss Katie Smull, of Centre Mills, is spending this week with her aunt Chestie Smull. Eddie M. came down the lane singing, "she is nearer home."

Last Friday morning there was a new arrival in Little Sugar Valley. Haven't heard yet whether it was a one-legged Beaver or a Black.

Misses Agnes and Annie Bierly came home last Monday morning to nurse their sick mother. STILL ANOTHER.

LIME FOR SALE.—Mr. D. J. Musser, of Penn Hall, gives notice that he has a lot of first-class lime on hand and offers it for sale at his place one half mile east of Penn Hall. Persons in need of lime will do well to call on him.

—Lines Dedicated to the memory of sister Irene Decker, deceased, late of Nittany, Pa.

Another new-made grave,
Another sad good-bye;
A loving sister has passed away
To yonder realms on high,
Where many loved ones gone before
Welcome her entrance at the door.

Death came to her relief,
Her patient suffering is o'er,
She's left us a little while,
She's only gone before.
The angel of death by light of day
Wafted her spirit from earth away.

Another tie in heaven,
Another one gone home,
One less our number here below
Will add to our heavenly home.
There she's awaiting us from afar
Waiting and watching with gates ajar.

Peaceful her slumber,
Her memory blest,
Gently we laid her
By the side of the rest.
The old churchyard will never be forgot,
We'll cherish in memory the sacred spot.

Where many grassy mounds arise
To remind us of those
Who now live in the skies,
In that beautiful mansion,
The home of the blest
She's waiting and watching for the rest

L. G. EMERICK.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

A Yankee Trick.

A six-foot Yankee, seated upon a load of brooms, drove his team up before the door of an establishment where he expected to find a purchaser. Jumping from his seat he entered the store and the following colloquy took place :

Yankee—'Can't I sell you a load of brooms to-day, mister ?'

Dealer—'No, don't want any.'

Yankee—'Better take 'em—sell 'em dog cheap.'

Dealer—'Don't want 'em ; got enough brooms.

Yankee—'I'll tell you what I'll do. If you'll take the lot, I'll let 'em go for a dollar a dozen ; you know they're worth double that.'

The dealer stroked his chin for a moment as if in deep thought and then replied : 'Well, I don't want any brooms as I told you, but I don't mind making a trade with you.'

Yankee—'What sort of a trade ?'

Dealer—'Well I'll take your whole load at a dollar a dozen, and pay you one half cash, you take the other half in trade.'

Yankee—'No you don't mister ! You'll charge me such an all fired profit on the other half that I might come out at the little end of the horn.'

Dealer—'Oh, no, I promise you that you shall have the goods at just what they cost me.'

Yankee—'Wall, mister, that's what I call squar' dealin'. It's a bargain.' And he commenced to unload the brooms in a pile on the sidewalk. When he got through he walked into the store. 'There you are, mister ; fourteen dozen, which I calculate makes just $7 comin' to me.'

Dealer—'Yes, that's right ; there's the money. Now what goods do you want for the other $7 !'

Yankee—'Wall, I dunno—You see, mister, I hain't much posted in your other truck, so I guess I'll take brooms !'

Mrs. Cleveland in Church.

'When Mrs. Cleveland goes to church,' says a Washington letter to the Memphis Avalanche, as soon as she enters the pew and takes a seat, she drops her pretty head upon her daintily gloved hand and devotes a moment to silent prayer. Then she settles herself for a quiet attention upon the service. She knows, of course, that she is the target of every eye in the church, and, though she tries to conceal her embarrassment, she is not able to do so entirely. When the pastor gives out the hymn she is glad to turn her attention to the hymn-book and forget the uncomfortable feeling which is the natural result of being stared at. When the minister leads in prayer her head is bowed, and it drops a little lower when he prays for 'the chief magistrate of the nation' and adds a petition for 'those that are dear to him.' She does not fidget about and lean up in the corner and rest her head upon her hand as Grover does, but sits straight and quiet, listening to the sermon from beginning to end. Of course she fans herself constantly, for she would not be a woman if she did not. When the basket goes around, she drops her contribution modestly into it, and when the closing hymn is given out, finds not only the hymn but the doxology corresponding in metre with it, and follows them closely to the end. When the services end, every neck is craned to get a look at her face and figure. She tries to appear unconcerned, bows to the church people near her whom she knows, talks a little to those nearest her, and is evidently relieved when the carriage door bangs and she is hidden from view of the crowd that was gathered on the sidewalk to see her pass from the church door to the carriage. Throughout, her conduct is full of dignity and gentle grace.'
